The New York Times front page story Fri, July 24, "Stock Traders Find Speed Pays, In Milliseconds".

The New York Times, Friday, July 24, validated our High Performance Computing Conference with their front page story.

The hot new thing on Wall Street is a way for traders to master the stock market, peek at investors' orders and get to market faster than their competitors.

High Performance Computing and the HPC related technologies are providing a competitive advantage to Wall Street firms. These firms report that they can make money with faster, more profitable trades using their High Performance Computing systems.

Our Conference will cover HPC, Cloud, Virtualization, Low Latency, Grid, Blade, Cluster and more.

Don't have time for the full day Conference? Register online for the free Show.
